Download AKVIS Points From SourceForge.net Every so often, I take advantage of Facebook's Marketplace and put up for auction my old camera gear and other small electronics on there. It's gotten me a couple of bucks, and the items are picked up by an auctioneer, so I don't even have to go through the hassle of doing that. This time, I had a camera on my hand and was just itching to get it out of my closet and use it. Being the photography nut I am, the camera started to invoke some memories – because when I was young, I had a Fuji Vivi camera. I took all the pictures I used to have on my hard drive, but had no more backups. So, without even giving it a thought, I decided to start snapping away. My primary use for this camera is to take pics for my medical journal. It has an infrared light which I use to take photos of various tissues and skin cancers. Plus, I use it to snap pics of embalming specimens and other oddities that I have to photograph. I shoot a lot of detail pics at a fairly high resolution, and even though it's pretty basic, it gets the job done. This camera is a Fujifilm X-M1. I bought it used in 2009. With a little fixing, it's as good as new. The camera can't
