The story itself is about a girl who has fallen in love with a transexual, but one of the most interesting stories is the fact that the author is transgender herself. It is written with a style that is quite hard to describe. It is beautifully illustrated with bright colours and there is a story about how she even has fallen in love with her black bower (bower is basically a fancy term for pet turtle). The story is divided into segments where there are several chapters for each of the different segments. Hanya 3.001 bintang yang tersisa di Bumi Ade dan dua.. Sava sedikit merasa sava ada dengan Perancis sedikit gampang menjelajahi dunia itu sendiri. It's a hardcover (paperback) book that I purchased in the late 90's or early 2000's. It's not a Kindle book. I'm not sure why it took so long to link it. In addition to that, the ISSN number is 1508-1122 and this is a relatively old book. It is possibly in the public domain. There is also a Japanese edition of the book. I bought the book for $9.99 plus shipping from Amazon, and it arrived in three days. It is available in various ebook formats as well. Q: Atom 0.33 editor reports duplicating modelers when editing package.json I have an older version of Atom installed which is still compatible with my installed version of Vue and I'm trying to bring it up to date, and have a better experience in general. The specific problem I'm having is that every time I edit a package.json file, once I save it, atom automatically re-opens it, duplicating the package models and reports. This makes it very hard to work on complex projects and impossible to save by mistake. I've tried updating all node/atoms dependencies and manually editing the package.json, but nothing changes. A: This issue is resolved in Atom v1.23.4 (Released on July 14, 2018) Q: How do I disable data truncation on strings? Possible Duplicate: How to get maximum width for input field in HTML I have a calendar where you can enter a birthday. I would like the date to only be 1 character width (11 for MM/DD/YYYY) Is there any way to do that in HTML? A: Well this is a late reply, but there's a W3C CSS3 property called max-width which prevents truncation of content. This also affects mobile devices and other areas where there is an odd gap on the page as the device is resized. This property can be applied to a textarea element as well as input[type="text"] so if you need to preserve the input for yourself and want the browser to truncate it automatically on mobile devices you could use it this way: Hope this is helpful to someone. A: You can apply a max-width to the element, which will prevent the browser from rendering past that width. A: I suggest you look at CSS3. Just use max-width in your selectors. width: 25px; max-width: 180px; @media all and (max-width: 320px) { width: 100px; max-width: 200px; } e79caf774b
