1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to a logic gate composed of a silicon substrate, a metal electrode and a superlattice layer, and further relates to an IC, a semiconductor device, a method of producing a superlattice layer, and a method of producing an IC. 2. Description of Related Art With the recent development of electronic devices, metal-oxide semiconductor (MOS) transistors, MOS capacitors, and other semiconductor elements have been reduced in size. In particular, the gate length of MOS transistors has been reduced to an order of submicrons. Under these circumstances, research into miniaturized MOS devices has made steady progress. Reduced gate length causes a decrease of a gate electric field, and thus brings about problems such as saturation of drain current due to hot electron effect. Therefore, a structure is proposed for achieving a low-voltage driving and a prolong life of a MOS device. For instance, Unexamined Japanese Patent Application KOKAI Publication No. 2000-5685 proposes a gated diode structure. In this structure, an Au film and a polycrystalline silicon film of a superlattice structure are used as a gate electrode and a Schottky junction is formed there
