Designs for Women and Kids. Ideal for Valentine's Day. Should optical illusions make us more careful on the road? The notion that optical illusions somehow limit the flow of information to the brain, with a corresponding diminution in the efficiency of a driver's reaction times, has been around for a long time. According to articles in The Daily Telegraph, in January 2006, when Australian company, The Visual Technology Laboratory at Monash University, released the first version of a new test to check drivers' vision on the road, it was reported that "
