Summary The works of George Smith, a sculptor who was heavily influenced by John Ruskin, were exhibited at the Royal Academy in the late 19th century. His sculptures of influential medieval religious leaders became prototypes for modern religious art. The first of Smith's bronze sculptures to become a celebrated cultural icon was the angel of St Hugh of Lincoln, discovered in a walled-up window of York Minster in 1860. A work initially intended to be the centrepiece of a Gothic Revival chapel, it was ignored by the parish until a relative called on a local artist, William Wilton, to take up the responsibility. The unfinished statue, however, became such a sensation that it was exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1862. Smith's work established the representation of mystical visions in medieval sculpture and emphasised spirituality as an integral component of the late medieval visual culture. A second well-known Smith work is The Finding of the Holy Grail, a painting showing the moment before Christ sets off on his last ride into Jerusalem, which was first exhibited in 1861. The painting was commissioned by Frederick Leighton, who subsequently included it in the first exhibition of the Society for the Protection of Ancient Monuments in 1870. A minor altarpiece depicting a chalice containing the consecrated Host being presented to the Virgin Mary was exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1868, and Smith often illustrated The Gospels for the Oxford Bible, published in 1875. Smith was elected to the Royal Academy in 1866, the same year that he married Annie Charlotte Elliott (known as Annie Elliott), daughter of James and Maria Elliott. They had five children: William Elliot, Edith Mary, Florence May, Edith Mary and Stella. Elliott bought an estate at Steep, near Oundle, Northamptonshire, and commissioned Smith to build a new house there to a design by John Harwood. They called the house Ashworth, and its grounds adjoined the Luttrell family estate at Holme Lacey. The couple sold the property in 1944. In 1876, Smith was elected to the Royal Academy's Academician Fellowship. He developed two hobbies in this period: tennis and horticulture. Together with his friend Joseph Pennell, he bought a plot of land in north London, and he took over the land in Holme Lacey. He developed the land into a garden and a tennis court, known as Cottage Place, which the Holme Lacey villagers

The Curves tool is used to adjust contrast and tones in images. After clicking on the button with the curving line, you can choose a point on a graph and drag it. This technique allows you to make the image look lighter or darker. The Gradient tool is used to make color changes in the image by changing the color of a button or shape. It is typically used to create patterns like rain, clouds or a rainbow. To make a gradient, you start by clicking the button with the Gradient tool. Next, you click and drag the cursor around the image to adjust the gradient. The Pen tool is one of the most powerful tools in Photoshop. It is great for drawing special shapes and creating patterns. You first click the button with the pen icon to select the type of tool you want to use. Then, you click and drag the cursor to make shapes, lines, circles and text. The Blend tool is another very powerful tool in Photoshop. You can use it to create interesting textures, combine two or more pictures together, and also create patterns. To create a texture using the Blend tool, you start by clicking the button with the texture icon. After that, you click and drag the cursor to blend two or more images together. The Eraser tool is similar to the Clone Stamp tool, but instead of using pixels from one place in the image, it uses the area below the image to erase unwanted areas. This tool is great for repairing images. The Paint Bucket tool is used to fill an area with a color. The tool has many different types of buckets for common uses, like filling areas with black, adjusting color, making selections, or selecting a group of pixels in one location. Photoshop's Healing tool is used to repair corrupt areas of an image. You can use the tool to select a "healing" area in the image, then drag the cursor to fix up the area. For example, if you had an image with a corrupted spot, you could use the Healing tool to select a spot that looked OK, then drag the cursor to repair the area. The Clone Stamp tool is similar to the Healing tool. You can use this tool to copy pixels in one area and paste them into another area. For example, if you had a place in the image that was missing or corrupted, you could copy a pixel from a different area, paste it, and save the image. Photoshop'
