The entire figurine consists of four identical parts. The figurine in the door handle position is the only one made in series. A limited edition of only 65,000 doorkeepers was produced and sold in the shop of the retailer Reima. The figurines have a retail price of about EUR 26. Design The basic design of the doorkeepers is based on the classic old, brown car handle, whose exterior has been replaced by the smooth-textured leather. The individual parts are identical and interchangeable. The variations come from the handles of the old doors and the car doors of the 1980s. The Doorkeeper, which stands approximately at a height of 120 cm, fits all doors. Origin In October 2006, Pekka Alakus, a designer, engineer, inventor and furniture maker, began selling at his furniture shop in Helsinki his idea of using the door handle as a new product design. He invented the Doorkeeper on a whim. The first Doorkeeper was sold in the shop in the autumn of 2006. The version created by Pekka Alakus is distinguished by the colour of the wooden parts.
