A novel liquid crystal (LC) mixture, composed of 2-methyltetrahydrofuran (MTHF) and 1,3-butanediol (1,3-BDO), which can be the balance of the chemical structure of 1-butoxy-2-methyltetrahydrofuran (BMTHF), was prepared and characterized. The phase transformation process, as well as the LC and thermal properties, were investigated in detail. An LC phase transition from the crystalline state to the nematic state was observed from -60 to 40 °C. Moreover, we confirmed the increased thermal stability of the MTHF/1,3-BDO mixture compared to that of BMTHF, due to the decreased flexibility of the structure. In addition, the hydrolytic stability of the mixture was successfully examined through high-temperature hydrolysis experiments and was shown to be superior to that of BMTHF. In addition, the LC mixture in a rod-like form was characterized as a self-standing thick LC film, indicating its potential for use as a novel LC material for high-temperature applications.

A woman who died a month after seeking medical help for her child at a California urgent care clinic could have easily been saved, if not for the high cost of treatment, a coroner said Tuesday. Documents filed in the death of Kelsey Putzelt, 27, and her baby Maisy Anne, who died last year, show that the care they received at the Santa Maria Urgent Care clinic cost more than $78,000. The clinic's own bills totaled more than $5,000 before being turned down by insurance, said Santa Barbara County Deputy Coroner Melissa Bailey. "With this kind of cost... you could buy a nice new car for all the medical bills of this family," she said. The clinic's bills for Putzelt included a bill from Santa Maria Hospital where she arrived Monday night for treatment with a gunshot wound to her stomach, Bailey said. The autopsy on the baby confirmed Maisy died of bleeding to the brain. Her doctor told
