IL-6, IL-8, interferon gamma inducible protein-10 (IP-10) and monocyte chemoattractant protein-1 (MCP-1) \[\[[@CR51], [@CR52], [@CR63], [@CR64], [@CR67]\]. NF-κB in the GM and its specific role in IP-10 production may have a contributing role in LRTI \[\[[@CR64]\]. IL-6 is a pleiotropic cytokine that has been implicated in lung inflammation of many inflammatory disorders including respiratory syncytial virus, systemic lupus erythematosus, asthma and systemic vasculitides \[[@CR50], [50]--[52]\]. IL-6 has been proposed to be a regulator of Toll-like receptor (TLR)-induced innate immune responses and is present in higher levels during EVD which is a systemic immune response \[[@CR56], [@CR59]\]. IL-8 is a neutrophil chemoattractant and it has been reported to be increased in serum of EVD patients compared to DF and DHF patients \[[@CR64]\]. Compared to the other cytokines, the lower levels of IP-10 observed in LRTI and EVD patients could be a result of the decreased expression and function of CD163 in EVD, and a

consequence of the
dysregulated
inflammatory responses, which are characteristic of EVD. Conclusions
{#Sec15}

This
study provides an important step towards understanding of the pathogenesis of LRTI by demonstrating that CD163 is significantly decreased in LRTI and EVD patients.
Interestingly, among

---

LRTI patients, the CD163 expression levels were found to be significantly lower in EVD compared to DF and DHF patients, suggesting a differential regulation of CD163 in the presence of different severity of LRTI. These results provide insights into the role of CD163 in the pathogenesis of LRTI and may be utilized in the future
