first major leap for internet services provider M2 is underway. M2, which is set to launch later this year, will be the first major provider in New Zealand to use an Open Network Architecture, which provides a framework to enable the operator to offer new services quickly and easily, even to competing services and mobile phone networks.

OPNA is a globally recognised standard that we have developed with the World Cable Council, which is based in the United States. The standard will allow M2 to offer faster and more efficient mobile internet access to our customers, on any device, anywhere in the world. We are also sharing Open Network Architecture with our wholesale customers so that we can offer products that are faster, more flexible and efficient. The other M2 product that we have been working on is a portal that will act as a dashboard for customers to check out the latest information about the state of their M2 services and to make changes to their accounts if necessary. This portal is aimed at customers rather than Network-As-A-Service providers like M2 so that it is quick and easy for them to check out if they are being charged the right amount of money for their services and the different plans they have. We are now in the middle of a $31.5 million capital program which will fund the roll out of Open Network Architecture on to our customers' networks, the new portal and associated marketing and customer care programs.
