Keymacro is a screen recording program that allows you to record your keyboard activities. The program captures full-screen keystrokes and mouse actions, as well as screen activities, and stores them on your hard drive for further use. This type of software is especially useful for professionals and amateurs that want to make a video of how they use their computer. Keymacro can record the keyboard operations in a list or an order, which allows you to quickly find out what the user does during a certain period of time. Such a list is great for video tutorials, as you can always refer back to the activity in order to see how to properly do a certain task. Keymacro also allows you to create a single-file video for you to submit to video sites like YouTube, where you can also post the recording as a comment to the video. However, Keymacro does not have an option for exporting the results to a video file, so you must take your video recording into a separate editor like PowerDVD Video

Player. In addition to capturing the keyboard and mouse actions, Keymacro can also record screen activities, such as the web browser in use, what the active window is, and if you are multitasking.
