Slingshot Cowboy VR is an intuitive virtual reality slingshot game that allows you to interact with wild bovines and what they are used for. The game features an interesting soundtrack with catchy theme songs and bright colours. It offers a quality VR experience with amazing graphics and smooth motion, combined with 3 weapons to use. We've even included a bonus game with our original wild gophers. Slingshot Cowboy VR VR utilizes the latest VR technology so you can sit back and enjoy the cow tipping experience while feeling comfortable in your own VR space. #VRContent #HTCVive #HTCViveController (CNN)- Perhaps you've seen the viral video of a man named "Barry" who somehow got his wife to blow up a pink balloon. A few weeks ago, that video now has over 9 million views. Now there's a new twist on the story and a new name you need to know: "Barry's hot wife." "Barry's hot wife - blown up a pink balloon WATCH: - Barry (@BarryAllen199) May 24, 2018 In a rare moment of gender equality, this "hot wife" is a woman named Rachel. But who is Rachel? Rachel talks to the CNN reporter who brought her to fame. (CNN)An online video has been spreading around social media, and its been viewed more than 9 million times. Some have called it a hoax, but it's the real deal. We know it's the real deal because it's about a very real family who gets caught up in a viral internet hoax. Rachel - who uses a pseudonym - says she doesn't know if her husband is the subject of the video. It's not a hoax. What's happening is this: Rachel's husband, Barry, films a video for his YouTube channel. In it, he wears a famous mask from a 80s film called "The Terminator" and slaps it on his face. Barry says, "Step on up. It's time to blow this thing up." After that, Rachel blows up a pink balloon, saying, "That's for you, you're being ridiculous." Rachel says she recorded the video, but claims

What's new in EAGLETALON Vs. HORDE OF THE FLIES:

Guo Yunchang-da-wu villager beef of farmers/millions AND MILLIONS of cows/cattle/sheep AND COWS/CATTLE/SHEEPS de/stain the face of the character/art of Chan-style (Chanists/Chan) painting

The character of Chan is a very special character, especially important in Buddhism. Chan means not only meditation practice but also the single-pointed mind. Chan doctrine and Chan painting are all about the pursuit of the single-pointed mind. Because its character is extremely charismatic, many people think that Chan is something of an "evil cult". However, this is absolutely wrong. In fact, Chan has played an important role in the evolution of China, facilitating a transition from Confucianism to Legalism. This is because Buddhism's focus on consciousness and self-cultivation is extremely useful when transforming both body and mind to achieve the ultimate goal--wisdom, meaning without wandering or confusion. Chan is the only one of the three major sects of Buddhism that has almost no monks (Chan monks), and Chan painting, which describes his true nature, is called "nature painting" (shizhuan-shizuan), as it can be seen clearly in nature. The truth of Chan is very clear and plain, and this is why Chan has spread to places such as Japan and Vietnam.
