For the past 5 years, the Festival has been in the process of building and strengthening its partnership with the private sector and corporate sponsors. This year, the 14th Cinemalaya, a celebration of Philippine independent filmmaking, will see key changes, including a new venue (Cultural Center of the Philippines, in Pasay), new programs, new jury, a new theme (Independent by Nature) and a new overall look (the new logo and uniform of the Cinemalaya Festival staff, designed by this year's costume designer, Lumay Archilla.) Cinemalaya, which means "Cinema's Fruit" in English, is always on a mission to promote local independent film production and nurture young independent film talents, with a special focus on Filipino cinema. This year's theme is Independent by Nature, which refers to the fact that these films don't need to have big bucks to bring them into life and usually require less than 40,000 pesos to produce. Besides being good tales for the young and aspiring filmmakers, the other reason to support this year's Cinemalaya festival is that its held right after the year's biggest and most important independent film festivals, the Venice, Cannes and Toronto. That's exactly why we're talking about the best 140 essential animated movies of all time. Start this July, you can enjoy the international audience recognition of Up Close's acclaimed hit, Shirin (2013) and the magic of its newly discovered Philippine release, Without An Option (2014), courtesy of headliner Lorna Tolentino and Hiram Aljundi. The two films, Prisoner of the Worse Preference from Up Close, and Without An Option from Up Close, can be seen as a double feature on Cinema One Originals for the June 2 to July 7, 20 days before the premiere of the two films together on July 7 at the commercial cinema. Prisoner of the Worse Preference stars internationally acclaimed Lorna Tolentino and local talent Arkin del Rosario, while Without An Option brings Irene Mari Soriano and Richard Gutierrez to the big screen.
