Rising Force, 4:25. In offices and homes across the continent, cold and flu season has arrived. As the flu season looms, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) is giving health officials a heads up on what they're expecting for the upcoming flu season. According to the CDC, between seven and 17 children get the flu each year. Most of those cases of flu occur in the winter. The worst-case scenario for the flu outbreak this year is a strain of influenza A that is similar to 2009's H1N1. Earlier this week, the first vaccine doses for the flu season are arriving at pharmacies across the country. It comes a little early, but experts say it's a good idea to get your vaccine this time around. Producer: Anna El-Khodor1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to wireless communication systems. More particularly, the present invention relates to a method and apparatus for improving signal quality in a wireless communication system. 2. Description of the Related Art In wireless communication systems employing multiple-input multiple-output (MIMO) transmission, the signal of interest is divided between antenna beams and transmitted. The strength of the signal received by each antenna element generally is determined by the transmitted signal and the characteristics of the transmitted signal, such as the beamforming gain, and noise. The received signals from each antenna element are processed to produce a beamformed signal. The beamforming process may include, for example, a beam weighting procedure where each beamforming element is coupled to a multiplier that produces the beamformer weight. These beam weights are supplied to the beamformer which combines the received signals into a single beamformed signal. An example application of such beamforming techniques is in the downlink of a cellular communication network where the transmitted signal is a 04aeff104c
