It isn't hard to create a template in Photoshop and save it using the Save for Web & Devices command. Then placing the finished design in your iPad's Photos album, you're bound to want to preserve that great design, right? On the Mac it's called a template. So what's the point of it? If you're already using your tablet as a workspace for design projects, then there's no reason you can't show off this new design. That is how I will go about this experiment. Usually you won't need to create a new Photoshop document on the Mac or iPad. And each time you create a new document, you need to make sure the last active Photoshop document is a template. I've got several of them saved for a variety of projects. If you're serious about your work, including the use of stock photography in your designs, then it's a must to get Adobe Stock into your workflow. There's a link in the Help menu that will bring up the online resources for downloading and adding third-party content to your projects. It's time for a quick review of Adobe Photoshop Creative Cloud. Adobe has come up with a major update to their flagship product. Along with bug fixes there are some interesting new features that should make this version a must have for photographers and designers. Adobe Photoshop Creative Cloud is an all-in-one photo package which encompasses all the usual features you'd expect, but also includes some tools for designers. It has over 1.5

million images and 12 image adjustment layers, as well as live filters including Color Dodge, Color Burn, Hue and Saturation.

Photoshop has been available for just over 20 years now, it's long lived so there have been plenty of upgrades, tweaks, and extensibility in that time. Here's our breakdown of the more superb updates - click the image to check them out. Face Recognition in Photoshop CS6 Face Alignment - A simple tool that dramatically improves the quality of images that feature faces. By placing the face in a more natural position, the face recognition will quickly and accurately align and display. This feature is great for logos, magazine covers, and other photos that have people in them in a way that isn't plumb or rotated. Importantly, you can bring to bear all of the camera and image information built into the most recent cameras designed to support face detection and detection. Face recognition also tears a new horizon into photos that are otherwise not in the right shape - long exposures that were taken through a cloudy sky can be corrected easily with a simple selection of the clouds and then a single click of the Face Align button. Smarter Retouching Tools - Photoshop can now detect subjects stands out by locating and removing artefacts including people in makeup, glasses, or just any other bit that's just not suitable for frame. Once an artefact is selected, like a bad selection outline for hair, you can click on the Eraser/Clone tool to erase the marker. Options to blend areas on the edges, remove the shadow, and apply a background texture all make this tool the right tool for removing unwanted areas or changing your selection. These additional control tools are ideal for images that somebody has tried to get rid of but couldn't.

This set of features will work on both modern Macs as well as modern Windows, including High Sierra and Windows 10. We will also be bringing the same new features to Photoshop for iPad as well as Photoshop Lightroom and other Adobe products. Photoshop is the successor to Adobe Photoshop Elements and the new Photoshop version is a much more comprehensive user experience, with new features and tools. The new features include a new editing workflow that has a built in navigation system for accessing the tools, templates and a host of other features. The software comes with a range of presets for many common image corrections. In the beginning of the CS6 release, Adobe announced that it was replacing the Focus Merge feature that it offered with the new Focus Merge 2.0. This Focus Merge 2.0 is a lot more powerful and versatile than the original Focus Merge. You can also read about all new features of Adobe Photoshop CC 2015 > We're planning to retire the legacy 3D feature set in a future release, in order to make way for new rendering features in the native GPU APIs, that will bring the best of 2D and 3D together in a next-generation workflow for Photoshop and other Adobe products, including the new Adobe Acute 3D app. We are also planning to bring the same new features to Adobe Acute 3D and the rest of the Adobe 2D product set. These will enable native GPU accelerated features and will be available in June 2021, when the new GPU API lands.

Simplified and Native GPU-based 2D & 3D: Powered by the new GPU-accelerated native APIs in the latest versions of the programmer environments, Photoshop Elements and Photoshop will now support 3D rendering and 2D graphics acceleration on the graphic card, rather than relying on the CPU. Simplified Design Environment: The new Photoshop Elements and Photoshop will provide a simplified and cleaner interface for working with digital imagery. Photoshop Elements and Photoshop will integrate the tools found in the state-of-the-art public beta version of Adobe Creative Cloud into a simplified design environment that will provide all the tools and functionality users need to improve or create their images.

Brightcove soft-launched a massive overhaul of the ProShow website and ProShow Producer desktop software last month. The new site features Personalization, Reporting, Timelines, Share and Discovery via the tabbed-in API, integration with Designer Anywhere, new templates, and various other user-interface and workflow enhancements. Creator Anywhere, which is installed on all Creative Cloud-based apps for desktop, mobile and video, is the first version of the API to make live content available for discovery, reporting and personalization. The system is now integrated with the ad server and 3rd party integrations and will be updated over time. Adobe's Behance platform launched as a web-based social network aimed at artists, designers, and photographers in November 2015. Behance now has more than 35 million accounts and over 73,000 groups and 1,800 uploaded projects. Adobe announced the launch of the Services Marketplace for Designers, where Photoshop, Lightroom, Dreamweaver and other products will be available to Creative Cloud subscribers. The new marketplace makes it easier for designers to work from home and collaborate with others—and take advantage of cloud-based technology tools, with a familiar online experience and access to a team of experts. Adobe continues to invest in its cloud-based platform for designers, releasing new features added to the Creative Cloud line of software products each month. Pipeline, a corporate-grade collaborative work management solution, was released in October 2015. Adobe Presentation also got a major upgrade for the creative experience, and Adobe XD received a major redesign to facilitate creation of design assets and prototypes.
